

Tuesday 03/03/15

Hello ! Today we went to classes and some of us were in a class called " home economy ". We had to take off our shoes and coat to enter the class. The students were on their phones. We had a recipe and we cooked. There were five mini kitchens. It was great because we ate what we cooked
It was a very interesting and original class. We really enjoyed it.

Then we had a welcome party with the headmaster of the junior highschool.

Then we ate at the cafeteria. It is very different from France because it is free but the food is also different. We were surprised because there is no dessert.

In the afternoon, we went on a very interesting guided tour of TURKU : we first went to a museum called Aboa Vetus, then the Art library, the Cathedral where we learnt many things about the history of Finland and Turku. And then we ended our tour with the city library which is a very cosy and welcoming both for the people who want to read the newspapers and those who want to study. Our guide spoke in English for the whole visit but she also spoke excellent French.

We spend the rest of the day with our penfriend.
